Gulf Oil Awards Contract

The contract for the construction of the Gulf Oil Company sulphur extraction plant, about three-quarters of a mile north of the Drywood River in the Pincher Creek wet gas field has been awarded to Parsons Engineering Company, E. D. Leoughton, Calgary, president for Gulf has announced.

The contract for the construction of the hydro-carbon treating and cyclizing plant has been awarded to Stearns-Rogers Engineering Company.

Detailed engineering drawings of the plant and plant site have already been completed. A CPR spur line will be run to the plant from Brocket.

In road miles, the plant site will be about 20 miles south of Pincher Creek and 84 miles from Lethbridge.

The initial plant, to be completed by September, will produce 225 tons of sulphur and 2,190 barrels of high quality oil per day. When completed it will be approximately one-quarter the size of the ultimate plant which will provide Trans-Canada Pipelines with 170,000,000 feet of natural gas per day.

No Foreseeable End to Canada's Mining Boom

There is no foreseeable end to Canada's current mining boom, says writer and economist Peter Newman, writing in the current issue of Maclean's magazine.

Only one fifth of Canada's one million square miles of favorable mineral prospecting ground has so far been closely investigated, says Newman, according to an estimate made by H. A. Graves, of the federal Department of Mines and Technical Services Mineral Resources Division.

In addition, the Maclean's writer reports, "geologists believe that at least half of our 900,000 square miles of oil-bearing land remains unexplored."

We are still using only a quarter of our hydro-electric power. And government experts estimate our potential of nuclear power is twenty-five times greater than the country's total hydro resources.

Mechanical progress

A century ago 50 man-hours were required to produce a 20 bushel per acre wheat crop.

At the beginning of this century, this had been reduced to eight man-hours per acre.

Today, with engineering techniques and modern farm machines a 20 bushel per acre crop can be produced with about three man-hours.

OUR COMPLETE SHORT STORY—

the long wait

—By THEODORE M. RIDER

UNCLE JAN twisted in his up your mind then?" His gruff wicker chair on the front porch made the younger man stiffen when he heard Carol's heels tap defensively, clicking swiftly on the sidewalk. "How could I marry her, then, Bax Hammond towered one step Jan? I was stone broke and had behind her and was pretty mad to start my automobile agency on the thin skin on her cheek a fly. And you know how things went. First, I couldn't get any stock. Then, my garage burned down and I had to start from scratch again." He paused to shake his head grimly. "I was a beautiful bust then. But now that things have worked out okay, she leaves me flat. Why? Didn't I do everything for her sake? Well, if she doesn't appreciate it, we're through!"

Worriedly, Jan tamped his warm pipe. Things were going bad for the youngsters. Only yesterday Carol had been positive that Bax had never really loved her. But when the old porch steps creaked, he gazed quizzically at the full summer moon and said, "A fine night! Did you two enjoy yourselves?"

Then the storm broke. "What's gotten into your niece, Jan? Yesterday, she insisted on buying her own ticket to the Barn Dance. Tonight, she paid her own way into the movies. Now, I ask you—"

Bax paused to settle his blue eyes indignantly on Carol's bowed red head, but she said in a very booted tone, "Girls are pretty independent now-days, aren't they, Uncle Jan?"

"Well, for the luva Pete!" Bax gasped explosively. "We're engaged, aren't we, Carol? And you'll be dependent on me for the rest of your life, won't you? Why, that's taken for granted, and that's the way I want it!"

"Oh, you do? Well, thanks for letting me know that, Mr. Boss Hammond. Now, I'll tell you something. Here's your ring back."

She jerked the sparkling diamond from her finger and shoved it into the stunned young man's palm, then slumped through the screen door with a speed that made Uncle Jan blink. "Well, what blew that hurricane up, son? You been trying to boss her?" He spoke gently and pretended not to notice that Bax's fingers were trembling like leaves as they raked through his dark hair.

"I lose her, Jan? Not a chance. She started acting up because I want to marry her this Sunday. What's bossy about wanting to be married right away?"

Well, there's wasn't anything bossy about that, Jan thought, and puffed clouds of fragrant smoke moodily into the sleeping morning glory vines. But Bax sure had a funny way of reckoning time! He'd been engaged to Carol for five long years. Of course, he'd been away overseas part of the time; still, why had he made her wait two years after his discharge? Carol had been more than patient with him, however. So it was kind of illogical that she should blow up now?

"Bax, why didn't you and Carol get hitched right after your army discharge? Or couldn't you make

MARKS SHOULD FALL

The spirited New York Rangers should break two club records this season. They should shatter their former record for most points in one season and also their mark of most wins in a season. Most points the Rangers ever totalled in one season was 67 which they set in 1949-50. After 51 games this season they had 59 points. Most wins by a Ranger club in one season was set in 1941-42 and 1953-54 when they won 29. After 51 games this term they had 25 victories. Both marks should fall very shortly.

Drainage of sloughs by pumping

OTTAWA.—The occurrence of several small sloughs in a field make seedling and harvesting difficult operations. But P. A. Boving, Experimental Farm, Canada Department of Agriculture, Swift Current, Sask., points out that small sloughs can be drained using a centrifugal pump driven by a small air cooled motor.

When the slough water is too alkaline it should be pumped into a drainage ditch or into one large slough. It is less inconvenient to have one large slough in a field than several small ones.

If the sloughs are not alkaline, the water can be used for irrigating by pumping it to a high point in the field. The water as it flows down hill will soak into the land providing more moisture to the young plants. The larger sloughs can be used as dugouts for early summer irrigating, especially if they cannot be drained economically in the spring.

In draining these sloughs, it might be advisable to use a rock-filled, sump at the side of the slough so the pump is close to the water source and the intake pipe as short as possible. The sump should be made deep enough to drain the slough completely. Sloughs should be pumped out after the spring runoff, and from three days to a week before seedling or cultivation, to allow the land to dry thoroughly.

Light weight plastic tubing or discarded canvas fire hose can be used for the delivery pipe when the water does not have to be raised more than 25 feet higher than the pump. The intake line should be of sound material, either flexible or rigid, but capable of withstanding the suction force. Joints must be airtight on the intake line to avoid the pump losing its prime.

Drainage benefits the farm and the farmer by making land usable which would otherwise be wasted.

Tough batteries

In the past two years, a Worcestershire firm, who make nickel cadmium alkaline batteries, have received more than half a million dollars' worth of orders from Canada. They designed, for the Canadian Government, special batteries capable of withstanding severe transport conditions to isolated sites, resisting extremely low temperatures, and of operating vital equipment without fail after long periods without skilled maintenance or attention.

Great progress reported in restoring Hamburg harbor

In Hamburg's dockland, life pulsates again. Activity throbs in the many byways. For the first time since the war Hamburg's harbor can once more claim to be the biggest in Germany.

In Hamburg's dockland, life pulsates again. Activity throbs in the many byways. For the first time since the war Hamburg's harbor can once more claim to be the biggest in Germany.

In 1953, its turnover—sea and inland traffic—stood at 16.5 million tons after a turnover of a mere 4.2 million tons in 1946. This means in actual fact that the harbor has recovered 75 percent of its pre-war turnover which, in 1936, was 22.5 million tons.

Today this highly modern harbor is not only the biggest in Germany but also the most efficient and "quickest" in the world. Its recovery has nevertheless not been as rapid as that of either Bremen, Rotterdam, or Antwerp, all three of which have increased their volume of traffic by more than 100 percent. The reasons are obvious. Both harbor and fleet were completely annihilated during the war. Furthermore, Hamburg lies on the mouth of the River Elbe, only 40 miles west of the Iron Curtain. Consequently 50 percent of the harbor's pre-war traffic has been cut off.

Hamburg is an open harbor without locks, and covers an area of over 40 square miles. The quays have a total length of nearly 55 miles. The overall turnover of the harbor was reduced to a fifth during the war.

In 1938 the harbor had 92 wharf shelters but at the end of the war only 34 remained. Now, thanks to the industry of the contractors and workmen, there are 57 completed and many more in various stages of construction; new fruit-shelters, fish-halls, railway tracks, cranes and floating grain elevators.

The port is today again associated with 900 of the world's harbors and no less than 206 shipping companies. Permission to build our own ships has been granted to Germany only within the last few years. Since then her shipyards have been working to capacity executing orders from all parts of the world.

Outside the harbor proper lies Hamburg's "free harbor," a very considerable area, first founded in 1888, which is still today internationally recognized. Within this area imported goods can be stored without customs formalities and the importer can collect whatever he may need as the occasion demands. Ships in transit for the other countries can deposit goods without having to account for them themselves.

Within the "free harbor" industries are established which convert raw materials into finished products. The finished goods can then be re-exported without great additional expense.

Wife work is by no means completed at the harbor, great progress has been made since the end of the war in restoring Hamburg to its former importance among the world's ports.

RED CROSS

Reports to you who give

CASE NO. 5674 (1950). Still receiving care through Red Cross... In 1950, when Geraldine was only eight months old, she was terribly burned in a fire that destroyed what little she had. She contracted a skin disease as the scars contracted, she had difficulty in moving her mouth enough to eat. Junior Red Cross brought her into Regina where some plastic surgery was done and she was discharged until 1955, when she was thought old enough for further repair. Here she is seen in the Junior Red Cross Hospital, happily nursing a doll. Santa brought her. Scar tissue on her forehead had made it impossible for her to close one of her really lovely eyes, even when she was sleeping. The Red Cross has helped to remove this scar tissue and grafted skin in its place.

Geraldine is only one of some 2,000 handicapped children who have been cared for by Red Cross in Canada during 1955.

And all the other humanitarian services of Red Cross is made possible by the voluntary contributions of all Canadians.

JUST FOR TODAY

I had noticed the man, how fine and pleasant he appeared. So, when he went to the cashier to pay for his lunch, I was the person who noticed when he dropped a little folder from his wallet. He was gone before I could retrieve it and give it to him. Now I carry it in my wallet. In part it reads:

"Just for today I will try to live through this day only, and not tackle my whole life problem at once. I can do something for twelve hours that would appeal me if I felt that I had to keep it up for a lifetime."

"Just for today I will adjust myself to what is, and not try to adjust everything to my own desires."

I will take my luck as it comes, and fit myself to it.

"Just for today I will try to strengthen my mind. I will study. I will learn something useful. I will not be a mental loafer. I will read something that requires effort, thought and concentration."

"Just for today I will exercise my soul in three ways: I will do somebody a good turn, and not get found out; if anyone knows about it, it will not count. I will do at least two things I do not want to do — just for exercise. I will not show anyone that my feelings are hurt; they may be hurt but today I will not show it."

There was more, equally interesting. Every time I read it I am struck by the fact that we could build a mighty happy nation if each man followed this philosophy. We would not need public charity, if each man were charitable in secret. We'd need precious few laws, if each man followed standards of his own like these.

F. U. A. Protests Game Act Amendments

EDMONTON, March 29 — Further amendments to the Alberta Game Act as the bill was originally introduced in the legislature last week today drew fire from the Farmers' Union of Alberta.

President A. W. Platt feels that the original proposal introduced by the government was good and generally satisfactory to everyone, including a number of fish and game league branches. By approving the changes made Wednesday, the government satisfied no one.

The clause allowing for pursuit of wounded game can, in effect, nullify for practical purposes the previous clause requiring the hunter to obtain permission to hunt. No one would object to a hunter being permitted to follow a blood trail in pursuit of big game, but to permit him to go anywhere in pursuit of a wounded duck, for instance, is ridiculous.

Another clause providing that a holder of a grazing lease has not even the right to post such land against hunting under any circumstances cannot possibly be justified. The control of breeding stock and the absolute necessity to protect pastures from fire at certain times make it imperative that the lease-holder have the power to control trespassing.

The sad part of the whole business is that probably all the difficulties could have been overcome if the government had taken the time to hold hearings of interested parties.

The Farmers' Union of Alberta will not rest content until the matter is properly settled, concluded Mr. Platt. The Union will be meeting shortly with the Western Stock Growers Association to jointly plan further action.

Costly mistake

How much did your first baby weigh at the age of nine months? At that age an infant in Palermo, Sicily, weighed 35 pounds, measured nearly three feet, had 11 teeth and drank six pints of milk a day ... Speaking of teeth, can dentists be insured against professional errors? I heard of a Chicago dentist who was alleged to have pulled two teeth by mistake and was sued by the patient for $100,000.

Officials of the A.H.A. announced today that 53 major awards will be offered to high school graduates and scholarships totaling $3,000 will be made to the Banff School of Fine Arts summer session; $2,000 in scholarships to the food training plan at the Calgary Institute of Technology and Art; $1,000 in scholarships to the Alcoholism Foundation of Alberta, and $5,000 has been put into a special fund to assist pupils attending public and separate schools. Approximately $30,000 will be spent by Alberta hoteliers to further education the province this year.

Since the project of awarding scholarships was adopted by the association in 1952, 199 students have been started on their way to higher education at the University of Alberta, 40 students have attended the Banff school of fine arts on A.H.A. scholarships, and 39 public and separate school pupils in grades 10, 11 and 12 have been financially assisted in their studies. In all, a total of $131,300 has been spent by Alberta hoteliers to assist 275 students in various phases of study during four years of operation.

It is intended that such a course will provide a basis of fully-trained personnel for Alberta hotels to further increase their service to the general public and community.

Scholarships offered by the A.H.A. are available to students residing in Alberta only and are designed to cover fees and expenses during a specified term of study.

Predicts common cold cure within the next five years

A cure for the common cold has been predicted for the relatively near future—possibly within five years. Dr. John Dingle, a leading investigator of respiratory disease, who made the prediction, also told the Common Cold Foundation that the probable treatment to thwart the cold virus will be a drug, and not a vaccine.

CHINGLISH?

HONG KONG—In a campaign against illiterate Communists, China is planning to introduce a 30-letter version of the English alphabet to replace the centuries-old Chinese written language of 30,000 painted characters.

The official New China News Agency said the committee to reform the Chinese written language announced the new trial alphabet recently.

China has about 20 main dialects and 200 less important ones, but only one 3,500-year-old written tongue. This is understood by literate speakers of all dialects but pronounced by each in a different way, and only scholars of great distinction know even half of the characters.

A national language reform conference in Peiping decided last October to popularize the Mandarin dialect, spoken in Peiping, then to spell out this unified speech in Roman characters.

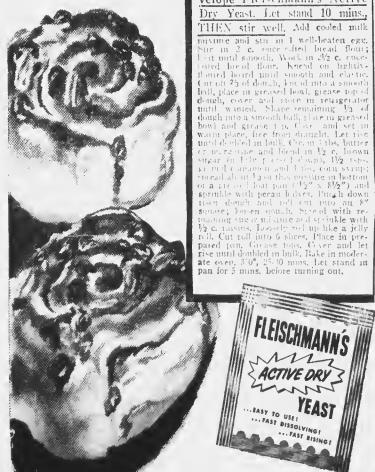

The new 30-letter alphabet will use all the English letters except "V" and an additional five letters representing sounds common to Chinese.

ORDER EARLY

See shortage package bees this spring

REGINA.—Beekeepers, who from all indications plan to keep more bees this year than in 1955, would do well to order packages now for timely delivery when spring arrives, according to the apriary division of the Saskatchewan Department of Agriculture.

A shortage of package bees is likely this spring because of an increased demand for bees in both the United States and Canada, and serious damage done to California supply colonies by recent floods.

Most beekeepers in the province prefer delivery during the last two weeks in April. Consequently, packing firms are overworked at that time and late orders may be delayed. Often there is a shortage of bees, and personnel to handle all the orders which have accumulated during these two weeks. The orders placed early get priority.

Early colonies in the field do the best from a production standpoint in most years. Colonies put out in April nearly always gather more honey in the season than those put out in May.

Many people who kept bees during sugar rationing still own bee equipment, although they no longer keep bees. The apriary division is conducting a survey of the province in an attempt to bring those with used beekeeping equipment for sale in contact with new beekeepers or those who intend to enlarge their enterprise.

Equipment may be listed with the Apriary Division, Plant Industry Branch, Regina, or advertised in a local newspaper, agriculture officials state, the purpose being to "encourage more people to become established in a pleasant, profitable sideline, or a full-time enterprise."

Strangely, if a child brings a cold from school, half of the rest of the family will come down with it, he said. But if an adult introduces the cold to the household, only one-fifth of the family will get a cold.

THATCHER LEADS

More Thatcher wheat was grown in Alberta and Saskatchewan last year than all other varieties put together. In Manitoba Selkirk took the lead. The figures are for Thatcher, Alberta 53.6 percent, Saskatchewan 59.3 and Manitoba (Selkirk) 64.6 percent.

Error leads to remarkable discovery

A remarkable scientific discovery was once made because of a very slight error in mathematical calculation. It happened when the planet Neptune was discovered.

In the olden days, our solar system was thought to consist of the sun and six planets: Mercury, Venus, Earth, Mars, and Saturn. After Sir William Herschel, the English astronomer, discovered Uranus, it was thought it would be the last of our system.

Mathematicians carefully computed the orbit of Uranus, so that astronomers could forecast the exact point in the sky in which it might be found on any night.

But Uranus did not behave exactly as the astronomers had predicted. The difference was very slight, but scientists were perplexed. There could be only one explanation: There must be still another planet beyond Uranus which attracted it slightly from its course.

Based on the errors of their first figures, mathematicians now computed where the unknown planet must be. When they had finished, astronomers turned their telescopes to the exact point called for, and there it was. The planet Neptune, 2,700,000,000 miles beyond the earth.

Fitting sentence

There's a magistrate in Western Ontario who is a student of Gilbert and Sullivan.

A well-to-do citizen, who should have known better, was found guilty of stealing three young trees for Christmas from a country forest.

For such an offense the law quite properly insists on a stiff fine. But fines, stiff or not, are easily paid and forgotten in these prosperous days. This magistrate had a better idea.

Making the "punishment fit the crime" he ordered the guilty party to plant 500 new trees in the county forest next Spring.

Canada House 'lottery' for seats to trooping-the-color ceremony

LONDON—For the second year in a row, Canada House will hold a "Royal Lottery" to determine what visiting Canadians will receive tickets to Britain's trooping-the-color ceremony.

The "trooping" has become the greatest single magnet for Canadian tourists. So many applied for tickets last summer—about 100 bds for each available seat—that Canada House decided to leave it to the luck of the draw. The same method will be used next year.

Only exceptions to the ballot will be a few prominent persons, aged persons and disabled veterans.

"The position is simply that the demand has increased far beyond the limited number of seats allocated to us by the Commonwealth Relations Office," said Ellie McLaughlin, social secretary at Canada House. "Many more Canadians are coming abroad these days, many of them take back color films of the trooping, and the demand grows."

Apply March 1

Applications should be made in advance, Miss McLaughlin says, but not before March 1. Experience has shown that persons who apply before that date change their minds.

There is a nominal charge for the tickets, which entitle the holder to a seat in the stands. There is nothing to prevent visitors attending without a ticket—but they don't get a seat and they should get there early.

Last summer, the trooping ceremony was canceled because of the National rail strike. This year will be held May 31, the Queen's official birthday. The colorful spectacle on the Horse Guards parade ground goes back some three centuries to the time when soldiers were trooped past the flag so that they would know where to rally in emergencies.

More honey in bees in hive first of April

Picture nine weeks to move in to a new house, raise a family, teach them their life work and get ready for the one month of the year in which you have to do your entire year's work. Sounds frantic doesn't it? You can see the entire nine weeks would be necessary.

This is exactly why, says W. G.

McMastrie, Saskatchewan Apiarist, packaged bees should be in the hive by the first week in April. They need the entire nine weeks to prepare for the honey flow starting in June.

Packaged bees should be ordered now and the preferred date of arrival should be hooked. Mr. McMastrie reports that experiments done over a period of years have shown that bees in the hive during the first week of April produce 35 percent more honey than bees put in the hives after the third week of April.

With only nine weeks to prepare for the honey flow you can spend the two weeks difference and could mean a lot.

Unusual

Waiting for ducks to come into decoys, one hunter was telling his companion that he had a very unusual retriever. A flight settled in, shots were fired and birds fell. The dog jumped out of the boat, ran lightly over the water, made the retrieve and returned with the bird. The owner said triumphantly, " Didn't I tell you? Did you notice what he did that was unusual?" His partner snorted, " Sure, did the darn dog can't even swim."

A tip about learning

With spring just around the corner, baseball players, track and field men, tennis players, golfers and other athletes are polishing up their equipment and getting ready for another season. The keen ones are thinking up new ways to get the jump on the opposition by doing extra pre-season conditioning and learning new skills.

Many of these athletes, however, will give up on their new and better ways of doing things because they seem strange and uncomfortable and don't seem to be as efficient as the old ways. This is one reason athletes often level off and fail to improve after showing a great deal of early promise.

Knute Rockne, the great Notre Dame coach, summed it up this way:

"When a new idea or system is tried, the athlete usually feels awkward and loses some of his skill at first, and usually some of his interest. The wise coach must sell the athlete on the idea that after this temporary period of decreased skill a new peak of efficiency will be reached."

So, if you're planning to try out some new ideas this season, remember this — don't shun them; when they don't seem to work immediately. Remember that there often is a loss of skill at first — a loss which will soon be overcome when you really learn the new technique.

The time it takes to learn the new skill or technique depends on the attention and effort you give to practice, and the confidence you have in yourself and your coach.

How to lose a pound

Tests by some of the world's top physiologists have established the amount of exercise it takes to lose a pound of fat. You would have to:

1. Jog easily for 45 miles.
2. Run at 10 miles an hour for more than four hours.
3. Do 5,700 continuous push-ups.

So, next time you hear an overweight athlete say that he's going to run his extra poundage off, let him know what he's in for. There's only one way to lose weight, and that's at the dinner table. Diet — not exercises — removes weight.

Canadian heart foundation is organized

Final steps were taken recently to organize a Canadian Heart Foundation to co-ordinate and intensify the fight against Canada's most lethal disease.

With the support of the federal health department, a conference at Ottawa of officials, doctors and laymen decided to seek a federal charter and launch the organization. Operation would be along the lines of similar national bodies on such items as cancer and tuberculosis.

Organization meeting of the foundation is expected to be held at Montreal June 7 before the Canadian Medical Association's annual meeting there.

"Federal officials look for a three-way partnership in providing funds through the foundation — from industry, from the public at large and from government at all levels, Mr. Martin said.

$1,000 Deaths

More than 41,000 Canadians died from heart disease in various forms in 1954. Mr. Martin told the conference that an estimated 180,000 Canadians suffer disability from it, 120,000 of whom are severely or totally disabled.

A major function of the foundation will be to raise money, Dr. George A. Strong of Vancouver, president of the Canadian Heart Association and chairman of the meeting, said.

He said it is hoped the work of the existing heart foundations might be integrated with that of the national foundation. Ontario, British Columbia and Quebec now have such bodies, and others are being organized in Saskatchewan and Manitoba.

The conference set up a committee to work out a constitution and other details for the establishment and funding of the foundation.

Dr. R. H. Farquharson of the University of Toronto is chairman. Other committee members are:

Compact calendars

On the lid of a new powder compact is a day-to-day calendar and a long-range calendar with which birthdays, holidays and any other dates can be determined for past or future years (up to 1957). To find out what date it is, one sets a rotating disc on the current year and month. This disc also serves for the long-range calendar.

BE A COURTEOUS DRIVER

The answer is that those whom Jesus attacked with such intensity aroused the populace against Him. But it is also probable that the crowds that cried "Crucify Him" were not the same who cried "Hosanna! Blessed is the King that cometh in the name of the Lord."

Nitrogenous fertilizers

Nitrogen for use as a fertilizer is on the market in gaseous, liquid and solid forms. Each has some advantage in regard to cost, application or ease of handling, but so far as the plant is concerned, it makes little difference which form is used if equal amounts of nitrogen are applied, says J. L. Doughty, Soil Research Laboratory, Canada Department of Agriculture, Swift Current, Sask.

When nitrogen in the form of ammonia is applied to a soil it is changed into nitrate which may be more easily absorbed, providing the soil temperatures and moisture supply are favourable. Practically all nitrogen used by plants enters the root system in the form of nitrate irrespective of the form initially applied to the soil.

The oxidation of ammonia to nitrate is very slow when the soil temperature is below 45 degrees F. and for this reason late fall application of nitrogen in the form of ammonia may be more efficient than spring application when the soil is warm. When ammonium ammonia is applied to a dry soil there is more danger of loss than when the soil is moist, for the ammonia gas must combine with the soil moisture to be relatively safe from loss by volatilization.

Nitrogen in the form of ammonia is held by the colloidal material and is relatively safe from loss by leaching, while the nitrate form may easily wash away in moisture and may be lost by deep percolation following heavy rains.

The farmer when deciding which nitrogenous fertilizer to use must consider the cost per unit of nitrogen, the method of application and the ease of handling. These factors must be balanced one against the other to determine which fertilizer is the most suitable for the particular conditions.

The farmer must keep in mind that the maximum return from any fertilizer will only be obtained when the other essential elements and moisture are present in adequate amounts. Nitrogen will not compensate for some other nutrient that may be lacking.

Names for seven little Indians all that bothers foster-mother

A young unmarried woman imported from Pennsylvania, already the foster-mother of two children orphaned nine years ago, heads for Idaho soon to collect seven little Indians whom she intends to adopt.

The whole happy brood will be turned loose in Dr. Imogene Barker's five-bedroom house, which she says, "we can fix up here and there to accommodate all nine children and a married couple now living with me."

"We all agree it will be a lot of fun. They need help, and I can give it to them. That's all there is to it."

"If there is one thing that troubles me," continued the 27-year-old Dr. Barker, "it is that the Indian children will all have to have their names changed from their tribal ones. I frankly admit it's going to be some task to find suitable names for these four girls and three boys."

Not really concerned

It was plain that she wasn't really concerned even about that, summing up the general easy-going, competent nature of a single woman who nine years ago took on the job of rearing two children whose father had died in a hospital where she had been training. The children, both boys, now are 11 and 13.

The Indian children, who are of the Shoshone tribe, are aged from 1 to 11. Dr. Barker said she became interested in them when she heard a talk by a missionary, and promptly agreed to adopt two children in a family whose difficulties were described as acute. Later, however, she found out there were seven children. Unhappily, she consented to take them all.

Air pockets on foot

Special boots, containing air pockets trapped between layers of rubber, provide warmth with a minimum of condensation. This is caused by the air pockets reducing the transmission of heat to the outside of the boot. These boots proved their worth on the approach climbs during the conquest of Everest. They have non-skid soles of a special rubber compound and design to grip on ice.

More Than 50,000 Bottles of Blood Collected in Alberta

For the second successive year more than 50,000 bottles of blood were collected in Alberta, said Dr. D. I. Buchanan, Blood Transfusion Service medical director, in his report of 1955 activities to the Alberta Division, C.R.C.S., held on March 15 and 16 in the Banff School of Fine Arts.

Although the 1955 total was 51,15 bottles, it was a drop of six per cent from 1954's total of 54,330 bottles. According to Dr. Buchanan, this trend is true of the service across Canada, and he attributed part of the fault to the fact there was no appeal made for any special project such as or gamma globulin or other blood fractions.

Permanent city clinics in Calgary and Edmonton collected 20,174 bottles but the field mobiles collected 30,982. He urged that city donors be encouraged to attend the clinics.

During the year 32,086 bottles of blood were given 16,471 patients at an average of nearly two 50ccs. per patient.

Of the remaining blood collected, 834 pools of liquid plasma were shipped to the Connaught Laboratories for fractionation.

Third and other blood group investigations totalled 35,639 samples processed, and this has become a major part of the work offered freely to the medical profession and through them, to the public.

Dr. Buchanan reported that if the present rate of using blood continues, the 250,000th bottle in Alberta will be administered about the end of 1956. By the end of December, 1954, 121,570 patients had received 214,247 bottles of blood since the program started in the province in July, 1947.

The medical director included in his report his grateful thanks to his many volunteer donors who have made this humanitarian service possible.

Application Forms Now Being Mailed

Application forms are being mailed to all Alberta High Schools to select delegates for three international Junior Red Cross training centres and an Alberta

Four Canadian students will attend an international centre at Barnett Hill, England, from July 24 to August 8, four will go to Henri Dunant House, Zelst, Holland, from July 26 to August 6; and 30 will go to Hood College, Frederick, Maryland, from August 1 to 10 - Junior Red Cross delegates from all over the world will attend these centres.

Sixty delegates from Alberta, and 20 from B. C., Saskatchewan and the U. S. will attend the Alberta Training Centre at Banff School of Fine Arts from June 24 to 30.

Students applying for the international centres must be aged 16 to 18 with one more year of school; must have high academic standing; be a leader, and belong to a Junior Red Cross branch.

Delegates will be selected by A. Aldridge, guidance supervisor of the Alberta Department of Education; Dr. M. R. Bow, Junior Red Cross Advisory Committee chairman, and Mrs. Beth Norgren, Alberta Director.

Delegates to the Alberta Training Centre must have a high academic standing, be aged 15 to 18 with one more year of school; be a leader, but do not have to belong to a Junior Red Cross branch. Recent photos or a snapshot should be sent with all applications.

Note about noses

"When I want any good head-work done, I always choose a man, if suitable otherwise, with a large nose." That's what Napoleon Bonaparte said. It is, therefore, very interesting to note that Wellington, who overcame Bonaparte at Waterloo, had a very large nose. For the headwork of other men with large noses, consider "Heady Eddie" Arcaro, America's greatest jockey, who is also referred to as "Banana Nose". Then there's that great jockey, Bob Hope, whose nose is laughingly referred to as a "ski jump".

Bob: "I want to get this message to every married woman in the country."

Advertising Manager: "There's only one sure way to do it. We'll address our letters to the husbands and mark them 'Personal and Private.'"
